

May 14, 2003

Subject: No, FCC's IPO spinning of the US bandwidth and airwaves?

Ladies and Gentlemen,

No to companies, media giants, anyone buying our future. The next big economic bubble could possibly be exploitation of bandwidths and airwaves. The FCC should be there, positioned to protect the citizenry so they can get into it and have access to it.

I'm in an area where I can not receive all the commercial station by Antenna. I'm on a fix income and can not afford cable or satellite. I'm afraid by the time I can afford to receive cable or satellite at today prices, the AOL's and Direct TV's will have bought up all the available bandwidth, increase monthly rates and restrict access to such an extent as to forbid me again receiving even the commercial channels.

FCC you have a lot of work to do now accomplishing your current mission. Your loosing track with what looks like a IPO offering and spin, discussing. Change your views and get me some public access to news and programming. The High Desert of California is not getting the access the FCC envisioned in the 1st place.

Thanks